Málaga, in the Costa del Sol region, is the area where the capital of the province—Málaga city—is located, the sixth largest city in Spain by population. In addition to the capital, the region also includes the municipalities of Almogía and Casabermeja. It was founded in the 7th century BC by the Roman Empire and has remained an important and prosperous city to this day. It offers a very high quality of life thanks to its average annual temperature of 18°C and its exceptional gastronomy. Its architectural monuments, such as Málaga Cathedral and the Episcopal Palace, are also noteworthy for their great historical value.
